

The Aviator – Gloucestershire Airport

Images supplied for sale on display in the restaurant

The Aviator has something for everyone, whether you are a passenger on one of the flights or an aviation enthusiast, bring your children to watch the planes, calling in for a coffee and a piece of homemade cake, having lunch or an evening meal, you will enjoy your visit.

The Aviator provides free Wi-Fi access for all their customers. It is licensed to sell alcoholic and soft beverages, along with freshly ground coffee and tea which are available every day.

Check the website for opening times and full details.

<http://www.theaviatorglos.co.uk/>

The Indigo Kings

Images supplied for Contotallyfused Album Cover and web pages

The Indigo Kings was formed in early 2009 by the band's bass player and songwriter, Al Symers, with nothing but a 'war & peace'-sized catalogue of scribbled words about love lost and found and an empty barn with a resident polystyrene alligator. He formed a dedicated band of talented musicians and began wading through his back catalogue of songs. After many gigs and a whole lot of whittling down, an album was released in January 2012, which went to #2 on the Amazon jazz download chart.

The second album, 'Contotallyfused' was released in May to coincide with a showcase gig at the Cheltenham Jazz Festival in 2014, followed by a tour to promote the album taking in Manchester, Marlborough, Birmingham, Nantwich, Upton and Twinwood.

The music is all original and primarily a mix of jazzy blues and swing, which melds together to make 'vintage pop'. Not tied to a specific genre, the combination of influences and styles makes for an exciting blend of sounds; Take the boogie piano, blues guitar, funky bass and jazzy drummer and add delicious female vocals to give the sound something completely different.

<http://www.theindigokings.co.uk/>